FOR WOMEN, the corridors of real business power in Britain have remained a virtual no-go area. But last year, beautiful Davinia Prince made it all the way to the top.

It was done with a mixture of charm, acquired skill and business acumen, and it happened in The Foundation.

By the end of the series last September, Davinia, widowed mother of two young children, had become joint managing director of a multi-million pound property development company. On Friday, the series returns for a further 17 episodes, with Davinia, played by Lynette Davies, facing new adventures in the boardroom.

Although the series was dubbed by at least one chauvinist as the "Petticoat Power Game," many women wrote to say they found it hopefully inspiring. Inevitably, it called into question the ability of women to handle both their emotional and business lives.

In the first episode last year, Davinia's husband, Don, died of a heart attack. Don had risen to the head of a property empire and creator of the Prince Foundation for One-Parent Families.

The board of the Prince Organisation attempted to buy off Davinia by offering her £2 million for her share of the business, but Davinia, who discovered that her husband had been having an affair with a younger woman, decided to prove she could compete with men on equal terms.

She was at first opposed by the Chairman of the board. Played by John Barron, Sir Clive Farmer is a man of impeccable background: Eton, Oxford and the Guards. He is charming, polite, always in command, and by the end of the series had gained considerable respect for Davinia's abilities.

From his original standpoint—summed up when he said, "I have nothing against listening to a pretty woman, nothing at all"—Sir Clive came to the conclusion that Davinia was almost as clever as himself.

Don Prince's right-hand man, the enigmatic and asexual Ronnie Bartlett (Geoffrey Whitehead), had expected to be in sole control of the company. At first he resented Davinia's interference but, like Sir Clive, found himself admiring her drive and enthusiasm.

Other members of the board, who were of more immediate support to Davinia, are bachelor solicitor Gareth Brown (William Gaunt) and the family doctor, Richard Montagu (Peter Copley). Brown's interest in Davinia might well be something more than mere business, but Montagu's role is clearly that of the family friend, although in the new series he becomes disenchanted with some of Davinia's methods.

Davinia's success in the boardroom had been remarkable, but by the end of the last series, her emotional life showed little improvement. She had become romantically involved first with an up-and-coming property agent, Douggie Taylor (Nicky Henson). They went on a business trip to Amsterdam where she met Dutch businessman Phillippe de Vries (Sandor Eles), but this second affair ended sadly when Davinia discovered de Vries was married.

In the new series, Davinia, still trying to find happiness on two often conflicting levels, discovers she has a secret admirer. And in a later episode, she meets Bill Wood (Mark McManus).

Wood is the construction manager of a large company headed by Sam Wyatt (Fulton MacKay), a charming but ruthless bully and one of Davinia's new boardroom problems.

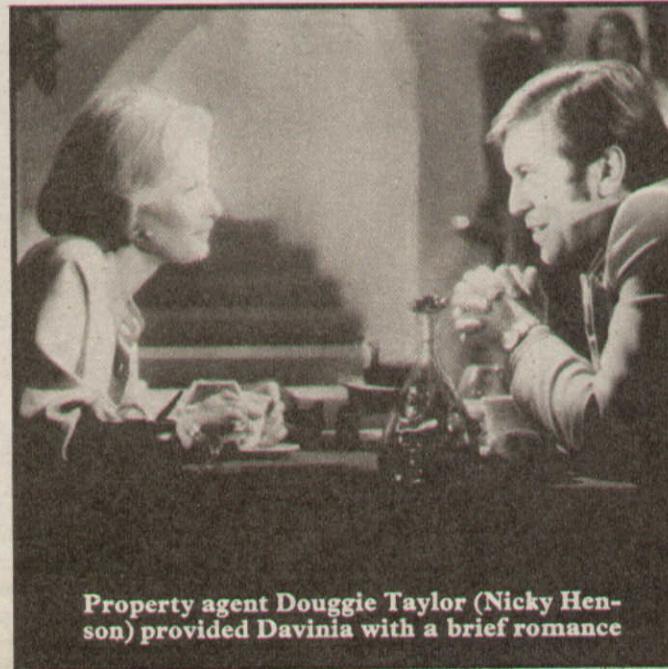

Another woman joins the Prince power game next week. She's Patricia Walker, played by Janet Spencer-Turner—you can meet her on page 15.

Lynette Davies as Davinia Prince, contriving to combine the roles of magnate and mother to daughter Emma (Patsy Kensit)

Sir Clive Farmer (John Barron). Clever, urbane chairman of the Prince Organisation board.

Ronnie Bartlett (Geoffrey Whitehead). Admirer of Davinia's energy and drive.

Richard Montagu (Peter Copley). Family doctor and friend, often puzzled by Davinia's tactics.

Bill Wood (Mark McManus). Future business associate with a personal interest.

Sam Wyatt (Fulton MacKay). A charming bully destined to oppose Davinia with cunning.

Will the Dark Lady rock the Foundation?

by Peter Genower

PATRICIA WYATT walks into the big-business intrigue of The Foundation next week. But the big question both for newcomers to the series and addicts who have followed the story from the outset is: how will this new character affect the destiny of joint Managing Director Davinia Prince and Co.?

Patricia is the daughter of Sam Wyatt, the head of a rival giant construction firm, and in next week's episode she is installed as Davinia's personal assistant. She's young and pretty but, compared with the astute Davinia, she seems naïve and uncultured in the politics of big business. But can the daughter of a pushy and ruthless tycoon remain content with a back seat at the Prince organisation?

What is certain is that the elfin, brown-eyed Janet Spencer-Turner, who plays Patricia, will be the face you can't forget by the end of next month. As well as her meaty part in The Foundation, you can see her this and next week in Will Shakespeare as Will's mysterious lover, The Dark Lady of the Sonnets.

Born on the Isle of Wight, the grand-daughter of a music hall singer, Janet, 26, learned her trade at the Brighton School of Drama before touring in repertory and gaining a minimum of TV experience. She was very appealing as Little Nell in Dickens, and had a small character part in General Hospital. Now, two major roles crop up in the same month.

"It's pure chance that the two series are on at the same time," she says. "I made Shakespeare two years ago and I'd almost forgotten about it, although it will be interesting to see how it looks on screen. The Dark Lady was a real puzzle in the life of Shakespeare—we know that she existed, but nobody knows just who she was, and John Mortimer, who wrote the series, has visualised her as a tantalising, opportunist lady who drives her men to distraction."

After Victorian costumes in Dickens and the finery of Elizabethan dress in Shakespeare, Janet was beginning to think she was going to be typecast in period parts, until The Foundation turned up. "It was nice to get back to modern dress again," she says, "although I wouldn't say the clothes Patricia Wyatt wears are the clothes I would choose for myself."

When she's not playing love games with Shakespeare or negotiating the boardroom jungle in The Foundation, Janet prefers a casual, easy-going life in the neat terraced cottage in Richmond, Surrey, where she lives with her solicitor-husband Martin. Asked to change into something for our picture, she emerged in her favourite rough-and-ready gear: pink and mauve rugby shirt, skin-tight emerald green cords, and a scruffy brown cardigan. She has two boisterous poodles, a passion for extra-strong peppermints and is never happier than when burning up a load of weeds and rubbish in her garden incinerator.

When you can drag her away from the weeding and romping with the dogs along the Thames towpath at Richmond, she learns her words, tucked away from all distractions, on the floor between the bed and the window in her bedroom. "It's my private little place where I can really concentrate on work. I simply tell my friends I'm retiring to the west wing."

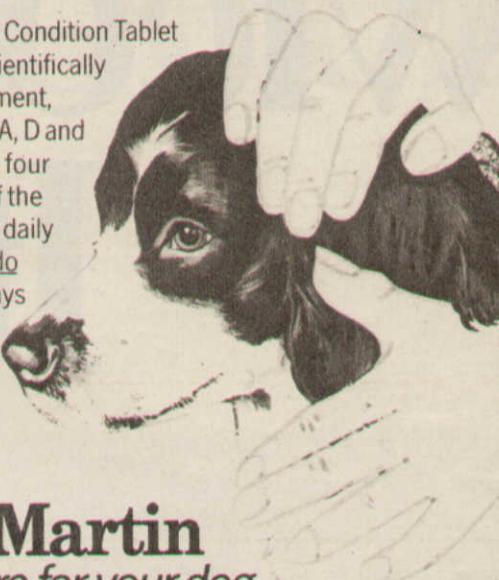

After the exposure she's getting on ITV just now, it wouldn't be surprising to find Janet Spencer-Turner spending more and more time in the "west wing": she should have enough scripts to wade through to last until Christmas.

How fans can do Grace a favour

PLEASE don't shake his hand, but Nickolas Grace would like viewers to tell him he's doing a good job in The Pink Medicine Show.

the big names of the small screen

HERE TODAY, Goon tomorrow. That's Harry Secombe's own caption for this picture. And shortly after it was taken in the garden of his Cheam home in Surrey, he took off for Australia.

He'll be back in July to celebrate being a grandad for the first time. His daughter Jenny, and her husband, music publisher Christopher Stock, are expecting their first child.

With work and family, he's been too preoccupied to worry about any other major events.

"I haven't had time to think about the World Cup," chuckles Harry—"anyway, they play with the wrong shaped ball." On his own field of play, he's got a lot of winning successes to celebrate. Apart from becoming a grandad, his eldest son, Andy, an actor, has just announced his engagement to an Angel—actress Joanna Monro, from the television series which gives an insight into the life of nurses.

Secombe is going bananas about the success of his new record—about raspberries; and on the writing front, a film company are interested in producing his novel, Twice Brightly. Secombe has also written a children's book, Katie the Nurgla. It's about a dragon. What does Nurgla mean? Says Harry Secombe: "I don't know. I just somehow sort of made it up."

is ridiculous. It was more like a sketch from the show."

It happened after Grace had ended his performance in Shakespeare's The Comedy of Errors, which was on television last month. He played Dromio of Ephesus, one of the twins.

"Stratford - upon - Avon

audiences are noted for their response to productions, but after the play a fan jumped up on stage, grabbed my hand and yanked me over the lights. I got up and blew kisses all round. Off stage I knew there was something wrong with my leg. They took me off to Warwick hospital where I discovered

I had injured my Achilles tendon. I was out of the show for three months."

Fit again, Grace has interested producers who want to stage the Shakespearean production on Broadway.

And to prove how fit he is, Grace is currently high kicking—higher than any chorus girl I'm told—wearing a dress, stockings, suspenders and frilly knickers at the Bristol Old Vic. He's M.C. in the production of Cabaret where he joins a line of chorus girls in one of the scenes. But Grace let me into a Pink Medicine type secret. "I wear wooly tights to cover the hairs on my legs."

A WORLD CUP without the pontificating Alf Garnett; without the absurdity of his opinions? Well, it doesn't seem quite the same. So you're getting yer actual Alf in Saturday's film, The Alf Garnett Saga, a sequel to the first, Till Death Us Do Part.

Everybody that is, except viewers in the Scottish Television region who'll have to wait until later in the summer before seeing Garnett's answer to Forsyte.

The rest will see George Best, Bobby Moore, and other soccer stars as Alf follows the fortunes of West Ham. But no bulldozing words on the World Cup.

"Well, it's not really yer

The World Cup: by yer actual Alf

World Cup, is it? Can't be taken seriously without yer England. And yer Robert Moore and that.

"I mean, it's just a bit of a sideshow to keep yer Dagos happy. Long as they're kicking each other they ain't killing each other, are they? Good for the tourists, let 'em get rid of them straw hats and that tequila rubbish me missus used to use as paint stripper.

"Yer England is the genuine champs. Proved it, ain't they? Already beaten yer Eyeties, and yer Commies, and the Jocks. And yer Brazilians had to behave like they was wrestling at Wembley Town Hall rather than yer Wembley Stadium to actually stop 'em.

"We got to let somebody else have a go otherwise it will get like the Yanks with their baseball. They're world champions because they're the only ones in the world wot plays it. Crafty. That's wot I call it, believe you me.

"All I'm worried about is that these Dago teams will want to get a bit of class and come looking for yer England lads and yer Hammers. Made a fortune out of coffee they have so they've got a few bob to chuck around. Cor! that would be sacrilege. Can you imagine yer Trevor Brooking with all his A-levels, turning out for one of those Dago teams?"

That's Alf's fantasy. But Johnny Speight tells me a real story of soccer star George Best. They did some filmed scenes in a pub opposite West Ham's soccer ground, and the wayward Georgie was to be seen arguing in a toilet.

Says Speight: "George simply wasn't happy in the shots, so we switched the scene to Manchester; same script, different toilet. You know, up there he was absolutely marvellous."

Which only goes to show that acting can sometimes be a matter of convenience.

The Californian Chelsea supporter

YOU CAN WATCH the World Cup finals on ITV this weekend and see if American actor Bruce Dern (left) hits the jackpot. In Britain for the opening of his new film, Coming Home, Dern is no slouch at sports. He was a reserve in the American Olympics athletics team in 1956, and was ninth out of 11 who finished the course in the London to Brighton road race of 1964. In addition, he gets all the British sporting papers sent to his home in Malibu, California, so that he can follow the soccer results. "I support Chelsea," he says.

Over lunch in London he gave me his World Cup predictions for which he has placed a "hefty" bet. He believes Argentina will win the Cup, or be in the final. Italy and West Germany will be placed.

Chatterbox

Travelling man, comedian Dickie Henderson, is back from South Africa, and after summer seasoning at Plymouth is off to Hongkong ... More fan clubs join the television list previously mentioned. Star Trek is the biggest, with 10 clubs in Britain alone ...

A hat trick for Yorkshire Television with the Writers' Guild Pye Award for Barry Cryer, Spike Millins, and Peter Vincent, for Harry Secombe's show, Have a Harry Christmas. It's the third major award for the company this year ... and their Faces of Communism has been bought for showing in America ... Bob Sharples and his orchestra from Opportunity Knocks are coming back in a Thames Television series ... George Benson, singer-guitarist from America, lined up for a Kenny Everett show.

The men who launched a thousand quips

WEDNESDAY'S Sounds of Britain promises to be quite riveting—it's about riveters, welders, and has a touch of nostalgia, with lots of humour from the Clydebank shipyards.

If you think life in a shipyard can't be funny, look to Billy Connolly, Scotland's biggest success since Scotch. He was once a welder in a Clyde shipyard.

Clyde Built, this week's programme, turns back the clock 30 years to the days when the raw material of humour in the shipyards came with jokes on the gaffers (they used to weld their boots to the ground); pigeons and greyhounds, and earthy songs and jokes in ale-swilling company.

Producer Jim McCann recreates the atmosphere in a studio where Alex Norton, Phil McCall, Alistair McDonald, and Meg Nichol (below) are among those who launch the quips. But you'll also find genuine pathos, nostalgia, and good humour of an age which has never really disappeared.

WORLD CUP '78

The Final

6.15 Brian Moore introduces live and uninterrupted satellite coverage of the world's greatest soccer match—the World Cup Final.

Only five countries have ever won the coveted title of World Champions—Brazil (1958, 1962, 1970), Uruguay (1930, 1950), Italy (1934, 1938), West Germany (1954, 1974) and England (1966).

Hugh Johns is the commentator at the River Plate Stadium in Buenos Aires, where the tournament kicked off a month ago, with West Germany v. Poland.

The ITV World Cup experts gather for their final verdicts—Manager of the Year Brian Clough, Hamburg superstar Kevin Keegan, and ex-internationals Jack Charlton, Ian St. John and Pat Crerand.

If the score is still level after 90min., half-an-hour's extra time will be played. So all following programmes would start approximately 30min. later than scheduled. If at the end of extra time the score is still level, the match will be replayed on Tuesday.

Challenge Cape Horn

In 1934 John Dewhurst left the Lancashire cotton industry and took a year off to consider what to do with his life. Since boyhood he had been captivated by the sea—so he joined the crew of the barque Viking, one of the last great sailing ships. She sailed from Copenhagen on the grain run to Australia, returning via Cape Horn, probably the wildest place in the world.

Just before he embarked, Dewhurst bought a cine camera to film this epic voyage—at one time lashing himself to the mast so that he could continue shooting during a fierce Cape Horn storm.
